

Given the fact that we don't know if we will return face-to-face in the fall, the plan is to move all of our previous efforts online and through video.

We will have our student leader film a video encouraging other students to register to vote and put it on the TCC webpage that is devoted to Civic Engagement.

We will coordinate with the VP of Student Services to email all of our students regarding voter registration: the how, when, where, deadlines, etc.

We will share videos with information about registering to vote with our department and our campus.

We will get our campus to add information in its weekly campus-wide email to include information directed at all faculty to encourage their students to vote.

We will participate in National Voter Registration Day. We will send out emails, etc.

We will be looking at adding a voter registration stop as part of the New Student Orientation.

We will also focus on core curriculum classes so that we have a more holistic approach to civic engagement rather than relying solely on Government faculty.

If we do meet face-to-face, the plan would stay the same, but the things we could go in person, we would go in person.
