

University of Charleston 2022 Democratic Engagement Action Plan

Developed by: Dr. Kara Fisher, Assistant Professor of Political Science

Executive Summary:

This nonpartisan democratic engagement action plan was developed by University of Charleston in West Virginia for the 2022 election. The purpose of this action plan is to increase nonpartisan democratic engagement and student voter registration, education, and turnout in the 2022 midterm election.

The University of Charleston (UC) has long committed to sustained and energetic civic engagement through such efforts as get out the vote campaigns, voter registration drives, and community involvement. Executing this commitment in the pandemic has presented new challenges and UC is proud to report that we have been able to activate a robust response, actualizing a variety of events in this unique election season.

The Midterm elections presented our UC community another opportunity for civic engagement. This year, the Pi Gamma Mu Social Science International Honor Society staffed a four-day registration and absentee ballot initiative on our campus. Students and faculty registered voters and helped their peers acquire absentee ballots across many US states. This effort is ongoing and our Political Science faculty are especially excited to help students figure out where they are registered and how they can vote absentee from our campus.

Additionally, we work closely with the West Virginia Secretary of State's Office to be sure we have the latest information to empower our students with all the tools they need to register in a timely manner and vote even when they are away from their West Virginian home polling place. Collegiate athletics is a significant part of the Golden Eagle campus culture. Student groups are coordinating locally with the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) to ensure that their peers are well apprised of their voting rights. The Black Student Union is hosting an intentional "Get Out the Vote" Campaign. Special consideration is given to marginalized voting groups including transgender communities, immigrant populations, formerly incarcerated citizens, among others.

As a teaching institution, UC recognizes that the promotion of voting as a civic responsibility is congruent with its Mission- to educate each student for a life of productive work, enlightened living, and community involvement. We hope that our university community, supported by our work and their dedication, will live active, engaged lives both by voting themselves and by democratizing access for civic engagement for others.

The goals for University of Charleston for the 2022 election are:

- Increased internal organizational participation in promoting civic engagement
- Expand community partnerships with three additional organizations
- Increased voter participation

Leadership:

Our leadership includes the following:

Kara Fisher, Honors College Director, Assistant Professor of Political Science
Hallie Chillage, Honors College Director, Assistant Professor of Sociology
Sidra Tahir, Student Body President
Kasey Lyons, Pi Gamma Mu President
Ryan McFarland, University of Charleston Alumni

Commitment:

The University of Charleston has been a signatory to the Higher Education Presidents' Commitment to Full Student Voter Participation since 2022.

The University of Charleston's vision is to fulfill its long-standing mission by embracing diversity and adopting innovative practices to develop and enhance professional programs that provide applied, career-focused, student-centered experiences that empower students for personal growth and professional success. Our mission is to educate each student for a life of productive work, enlightened living, and community involvement. We want every student to develop a pattern of community involvement. The foundation of our society rests on community involvement, so we want our graduates to take leadership responsibility and initiative in shaping organizations, institutions and communities (University of Charleston, 2022; www.ucwv.edu)

A newly formed Diversity Equity Inclusion and Belonging Committee at the University of Charleston has affirmed that "by embracing and integrating diversity, equity, inclusion and belonging at UC, we bring out everyone's best and work collaboratively to build a better future." UC is committed to the following goals for a culture of inclusive practice promoting engagement:

- Be a Diverse Community in Composition and Thought
- Foster Equity and Inclusion
- Acknowledge and promote our diversity internally and publicly
- Enhance a Culture of Belonging

Each year on Labor Day our entire campus reflects on civic engagement and participates in a day-long event for community involvement, Labor of Love. This focus on engagement has presented the perfect opportunity to expand student understanding and experience of community. We measure student engagement in a post activity survey for this co-curricular event.
